What's going on this week?

Travel company, Expedia, has banned the sale of holidays involving dolphins and whales. The decision follows calls led by public figures such as Joanna Lumley and the Prime Minister's wife, Carrie Johnson, for an end to holidaymakers swimming with captive creatures or watching them perform tricks.

Main question:

Should we be allowed to swim with dolphins?

Listen, think, share

- Look at this week's poster. Has anyone ever seen a dolphin or had a close contact experience? What was it like?
- What do you know about dolphins and whales already?
- Explain that in this week's news, one travel company have banned all trips and holidays that include experiences with dolphins and whales. Why do you think they might have made this decision?
- Read through the information found on the assembly resource about Expedia's decision and the wider debate around the issue. Talk about your own views about these kinds of experiences and trips.
- Do you think they have made the right decision to ban the sale of tickets to these attractions? Do you think that it will mean fewer people will go?
- If you had a choice, would you prefer to see dolphins at an attraction like SeaWorld or in the wild on a boat trip?
- Some people think that by keeping some animals in captivity, we can learn about how to protect them in the future. Do you think this is important to consider?
- Watch this week's useful video, which outlines 10 facts about dolphins. Which of the facts surprises you the most?

Reflection

There are different reasons why animals are kept in captivity, we should do our own research so we are able to make informed decisions about the places we visit and the actions we take to stand up for what we think is right.
